

Looking back: the added value of the Maasvlakte 2 interdisciplinary research.

Björn Smit

In this contribution a review of the day will be presented which focuses on the scientific and methodological results which have increased our knowledge on prehistoric occupation in the Netherlands and in future projects will help improve the ways we study submerged landscapes. Furthermore the added value of interdisciplinary research will be stressed. Finally also the dissemination of information to a wider general audience will be addressed because this will gain more interest of the wider public for our shared cultural heritage, which especially in the Netherlands is generally invisible.
